The Gazette of last week asked us to note its smartness. We have. In publishing a notice of the death of Nick Fox, it announced that he died in 1865.

A Big Owl.

A Curiosity.
Mr. Isaiah Frasure discovered among the limbs of his flock a freak of nature, which certainly has no counterpart in the museum of animal monstrosities.

The lamb has one head with double face, the two noses, mouth eyes and ears being complete and perfect. From the neck down are two perfect and distinct bodies connected by a membrane to about the middle of the body. The lamb is full size, but was dead when discovered. Mr. Flave Case will preserve it.

Trees.
Do we not need an ordinance to protect our shade trees? Some of our handsomest shade trees have been almost ruined by the boys searching for slippery elm bark.

It would cost no small sum to box the trees on our streets, because the boxes are very unsightly. It would cost less, and give a better lesson on civilized manners, to send a few of our boys to the new lock up to meditate on bread and water a few days.

The audience showed their appreciation of the lecture, by a very liberal collection for the benefit of the lecturer.

Death of Wm. Kanode.

The sudden death of Wm. Kanode, briefly announced last week, occasioned universal sorrow among the citizens of Logan, where he was known from infancy. He was a man of good heart, and generous and warm affection. His impulse and enthusiasm led him ever to the front, and no matter whether it was a battle charge, a work of charity, or a Democratic election, he was always foremost, and always doing as much as it was in human energy to accomplish.

Of late years he has been attentive to business, and developed capabilities of the highest order. He will be very much missed, and his death will long be sincerely mourned by his friends and companions.

The funeral on Friday was very largely attended. Rev. Burns of the M. E. Church, conducted the religious exercises.

The obsequies were under direction of the G. A. R., assisted by the S. of V. The remains were interred in the old cemetery.

Before depositing the coffin, Capt. John G. Reeves of Lancaster, his officer, comrade and friend, spoke of the dead soldier as follows:

TESTIMONIAL.

COMRADES—We have met to pay our last tribute of respect to the body of our deceased comrade, William H. Kanode, late of Company C, 11th Ohio Cavalry.

Willie Kanode enlisted in the service of the United States for three years, under Lieut. John Van Pearce, recruiting for the 7th Ohio Cavalry, during the month of September, 1861, he then being in his 17th year, and his mother consenting to his enlistment.

He was the youngest soldier in the company and regiment, and one of the best. We all loved him, the younger members as a brother, the older as a son. On parade or guard mount, his uniform was always the neatest and his arms shone like burnished silver.

While on duty at Ft. Larimer, although regular army soldiers, he always was selected as orderly to the Commanding Officer, on account of the neatness of his uniform and the perfect order of his arms.

Whenever or wherever duty called, he was the first to respond, never complaining, no matter whether it was to carry dispatches, go on a wild forty mile ride after night to the rescue of comrades surrounded by treacherous blood thirsty Indians, to face the mountain blizzard to go to the relief of Ft. Halleck, on which expedition two of our comrades froze to death in their saddles by our sides, or a wild chase after a sharp eyed scout with hostile Indians, Willie was the first in the saddle and the last to leave it until the object of the expedition was fully accomplished.

In the camp or on these expeditions he was the life of the company, always jovial, never shirking duty, and at the bedside of a sick or wounded comrade he watched with patient kindness; his voice as low, his touch as tender and soothing as a woman's; always ready for any pleasure or spend his last cent to alleviate the sufferings of minister to the wants of his afflicted comrades. Can it be wondered then that he all loved the boy, or that he had not an enemy in the whole regiment? I could spend hours detailing incidents showing his fearless, generous nature. But it can all be summed up in these words: He was as brave and fearless as a lion, as kind and gentle as a woman, generous to a fault, loyal to his flag and country, and a true friend or braver soldier never wore the blue.

We all have faults and foibles, he had his, but over them we as citizens and comrades cast the broad mantle of friendship and charity, while we will cherish ever green in our memories his noble services to his country, his warm generous nature and his countless deeds of kindness and charity, strewn flowers in the pathway of a way weary son.

Willie has fought the battle of life, he has won his arms and laid him down to rest in the sweet sleep of death. Peace to his ashes.

While there, a serious outbreak occurring among the tribes of Indians west of Ft. Larimer, the Battalion was ordered to that point, and first proceeded to Ft. Leavenworth, and from there across the plains via Ft. Kearney to Ft. Larimer, where it arrived June 4, 1862. From there the Company was divided into small detachments and stationed at various points along the Overland trail and adjacent route from Deer Creek to South Pass, to perform the arduous and dangerous duties of guarding the mail coaches and emigrant trains along the route from the depredated hostile Indians. From this time until the discharge of the Company in April, 1865, the Company was stationed at various points from Julesburg to South Pass, on the North Platte, and from Julesburg to Ft. Halleck on the South Platte, and Fort situated at the foot of the Medicine Bow Mountain, Company C, built in the fall of 1862.

Comrade Kanode served with the Company until it was mustered out, at Omaha, Neb. April 1865, having served over 3 years and 6 months, and was honorably discharged.

A Sister's Tribute.

William H. Kanode was born in Logan, Nov. 30, 1844, died at the Park Hotel, Magnetic Springs, Marion Co., O., May 20th, 1884.

He was married to Mary Alice Forreel, Oct. 24, 1863. He was ill for two months before his death, and in the last week his decline was very rapid and his death sudden and unexpected to many of his friends. Rev. Mr. Bowers, of Richmond, O., attended him in his last hours and baptized him. He was one of a family of six children, of whom one sister only survives and with his wife remains to mourn his loss. He was dearly loved and will be sadly missed by the members of his family.

My mother was of an ardent and enthusiastic temperament; warmly attached to his friends and ready to yield his resentment against his enemies. At the cry of distress he was moved to action, and the request for help met in him a ready response. A few months since, when the great floods gave us an opportunity to show or charity, none was more ready to do more free to give than he.

When but a boy he enlisted in the cavalry service, and the Captain of his company, on hearing of his death, wrote a letter to a comrade in which he pays this tribute to my brother as a soldier. Captain Reeves writes: "He was the baby of our company and regiment and we all were strongly attached to him. I do not believe he had an enemy in the whole regiment. He had his faults, we all have; but he was brave, generous to a fault, and a warmer hearted, truer soldier never wore the blue."

Tuesday night, on the arrival of his sister to his bedside, he raised up, called her by name and kissed her, and said: "Oh, I am dying, dying! I cannot get well." She answered, "Yes, my brother, I fear you are dying, and oh! won't you have a minister?" He replied, "Yes." Thereupon she sent for one immediately, but he lived six miles away and the delay, owing to the distance, and knowing that his life was drawing to a close, he said to him: "Brother, I fear he will not get here in time." "Oh, yes he will," he said, "I will live till he comes," and he did live to hear Christ's disciple invoke the Diving Blessings of our merciful Savior upon him, for he was conscious to the last.

Mr. S. R. Hibbard died of consumption on last Thursday. His remains were taken to Hillsdale for interment on last Friday.

Mr. Hibbard came to Logan in May, 1882, and engaged in the dry goods business. He was an excellent man and made many friends among our citizens, all of whom unite in tender of sympathy to his bereaved family.

Obituary.
Death, the destroyer of us all, visited our beloved friend, Mr. George O'Neil, at Starr, not long since.

Mr. O'Neil was a beloved and loving man. He was not a nominal Christian, for his name was registered on no class book; but he was a Christian by practice. He was strictly honest, truthful and generous. No one came to his door hungry but he was fed. Mr. O'Neil was a special friend of mine and I sympathize with the family in his demise. As a tribute of respect for the dead and a reminiscence for the living we would say we all miss Mr. O'Neil and mourn his loss. But why should we grieve after him? May God's spirit comfort the family he has left to mourn for him. May it guide them in the humble path of rectitude in which the departed died. And may the Lord, who has been under the guardianship of Mr. O'Neil, Dear ones, at home, your affliction is our distress. But our regret for the dead, for he is in heaven.
